n accordance with her suggestions. She lived o see it crowned with a glorious success. Hestilities opened with an almost unbroken series of disasters to the Union arms. "Then there came a suided change. The campaign of the Tennessee was opened. Fort Henry fell, Columbus and Bowling Green were evacuated. Fort Donelson fell with 14,000 froops into Union hands. and Corinth, and the fall of Vicksburg fol-lowed each other in quick succession. By and by the inquiry arose, "who planned this won-derful campaign?" Grant had achieved a brilliant success as an energetic and efficient General, but he had been acting on a line laid out for him. No one pretended that he had planned the campaign. A debate as to its ori-gin took place in the House of Representatives, Feb. 24th, 1862, and in the Senate, March 13, following, without result. It was ascribed to hippen, to Stanton, to Halleck, to Admiral Linceln, to Stanton, to Hulleck, to Admiral Foote, to the combined wisdom of Grant Hal-leck and Foote, to C. F. Smith and Fremont. But Lincoln, Stanton, Wade, Colonel Scott, the Assistant Secretary of War, to whom Miss Carroll had submitted her plan, and who had informed her of its acceptance, and other Cabinet officers remained silent.

Students of American history, will remem-er the historic name of Carroll, than which, one for patriotism, stands higher on its pages. tharles Carroll of Carrollton, Marriand, born to the heritage of vast estates, the fast of the Manorial Grants of Maryland, the weelthrest man in the colonics at the time of the revolution, in the prime of life and mathood, only thirty-nine years of age, he was willing to sacrifice everything on the altar of Juman liberty.

In reply to a latter from a parliamentary friend, in which he had said, "that 6,000 Eng-lish troops would murch from one and of the Declaration, a member standing near, knowing his princely wealth, observed, "There go a few multions," adding however, "there are The vice admiral is chairman of the Lighthouse of heaviers beautiful and the position of the control of the con

"After this season I shall retire," said Professor Bartholomew, owner of the educated horses, to a reporter. "I will take my horses home with me and see just how far their education can be carried. I want one of them to learn to go to the store, and another to run errands." The professor and a Leader reporter were seated in the rather elegant private office of the former, aboard his car that is side tracked down by the Central depot, when this conversation took place. The car is a model one throughout. The grooms have one end of it themselves, while the professor and his son occupy the other, both as an offlies and sleeping room. The horses, twenty in number, have roomy and they are never crowded. The professor talks freely about the work of educating horses. "It can't be learned from books," he said. "The best book that was ever written on horse education cannot make a trainer out of a man unless he has had experience. When I first started my show out on the road, four or five years ago, people advised to get a copyright, but I told them I preferred competition. Something after this order started out a year ago, but had to go inder. The trouble was the horse written on horse education cannot make a trainer out of a man unless he has had experience. Trained horses for the ring, and know man's the gauges were inspection. Let me prove it to you. My horses know that certain commands mean certain cert tuberances on the human cranium do to the practical phrenologist. I can gene-rally examine a horse's head and deter-mine his disposition. If they are easy to learn they are taken into my school. Their lessons are repeated over and over to them until they learn them by heart. No book can tell how it is done. It is only by practice and experience and possess-ing a natural adaptation to the work. You read sometimes about an educated horse in a sirror wing. You go and you say the in a circus ring. You go and you see the ring master with a monster whip in his hand. The horse gallops around the ring. The master yells, 'hi, hil' to attract his attention. Then he cracks the lash under the horse and shouts 'Lie down' Down he goes. Now that is mere trickery—a compliance with a command to avoid punishment. A man, to become a successibility of the command to a successibility o punishment. A man, to become a successful teacher of horses, doesn't want too much science. Practical knowledge and experience will serve him much better. He doesn't want too many whips and spurs. Gentleness conquers quicker than force. It is a life-work.—Ciccolonal Leader.

Uncle Sam's Navy

United States naval register for 1885, The Caited States naval register for 1885, which has just been issued, is an interesting and instructive work. It is a volume of 211 pages. Of these 210 contain lists of the officers of the navy, with their residences stations, and record of service, and one page contains a list of thirty-five ships, upon which they are supposed to serve. According to the register there are borne on the active rester of the service 1 admiral, 1 vice-admiral, 7 real-admirals, 16 commoderes, 45 captains, to the mass a cloud carmel being flag and the service of the commoderes, 45 captains, to the mass a cloud carmel being flag and the service of the service of the commoderes, 45 captains, the convention, gave a fote, that no doubt suggested to Barthoidi the idea of his big statue, "Liberty enlightening the world." The ediles arected a collossal figure of the goddess of liberty: close by was a huge stake or bonfire; site, the present Place to a Concorde, on which the paraphernalia of royalt was piled—the throne, sceptre, crown, royal mantles, symbolical lilies, escutcheous of the nobility etc. When a torch was applied to the property of the service real-admirals, 16 commodores, 45 captains, 85 commanders. 74 lieutenant - commanders, 257 lieutenants, 82 lieutenants (junior grade,) 183 cusigns, 82 naval cadets, 158 medical officers, 235 engineer officers, 37 professors and chaptains. 31 naval constructors and 200 war-rant officers—at a total of 1,613. In addition officers of all grades, most of them of superior rank, and consequently in the enjoyment of the Sponses was instituted by the Continent to the other, Mr. Carroll says, "so they might, but ther will be mostere of the spot cally on which they working. They will find sought but ensembles before them. If we are heaten on the plains will will retrest to the mountains and defy them. Our resources will increase with our difficulties." When, as a member along beaten when the superior pay the standing near, knowing his princely scalible derived. This is found that the number of superior pay. This list alone comprises forly the Council of the Five Hundred in 1796, the Council of the Five Hundred in 1796, in the continuous architecture of the millennium.

The fete of the Sponses was instituted by the Council of the Five Hundred in 1796, it might now be proclaimed as an actuality. It might now be proclaimed as an actuality of edict formula, that the world must be peopled. Every town in France was to observe the feature of cadefa at the hardy pay rolls, exclusive of cadefa a beclaration, a member standing near, knowing his princely sealth, observed, "There go a few unifions," adding however, "there are many Carrolls and the fictish will not know which one it is." Mr. Carroll immediately addied to his mime, "of Carroll from "Such are the famous Tallapoosa and the fittied of the things that keep the name of Carroll green in the memory of all loyal Americans and imseribe it with the names of Washington and Franklin and Adams and Jefferson ned other revolutionary patricts on the pages of their history. were discussing the resolution in Coogress to find out—but Mr. Lincoln and Mr. Stanton were opposed to its being known that the armise were moving under the plan of a civilian (and that civilian a weman.) He wanted the armise were moving under the plan of a civilian (and that civilian a weman.) He wanted the armise to believe that they were doing the whole beginness of saving the country."

In repeated letters Mr. Wade testified that her prevented the acaptaign, speaks of her great previous services, of her influence, which prevented the secession of Maryland, and of the powerful pamphlets prepared by her on the conduct of the war, at Mr. Lincoln's request.

On the 30th of Nov., 1861, Miss Carrell laid her plan, with accompanying maps and diagrams, before the war department, saw it speedily adopted, and its details carried out. In accordance with her suggestions. See lived to see it crowned with a glorious success.

Hostilities opened with an almost unbroken across of diseaters to the lining arms. "Then her suggestions are considered and all animals" across of diseaters to the lining arms. "Then her war are the region of about him; to the fine most beautiful disease. However, for their training requires a longer time and they would be good for only a short time."

"If there is anything in phrenology it applies to horses, too," replied the professor. "Certain bumps on a horse's head to see it crowned with an almost unbroken means just as much to me as certain protuberances on the human cranium do to disasters to the lining arms." where there is nothing revolting or inrbalent but the flow of soul. The feast of reason has been relegated to the Pantheon. Fetes have ever been gay whether under King, emperor or president. At the wedding of Robert, brother of St. Louis, in the thirteenth century, the fiddlers, were mounted on the backs o bullocks coparisoned in scarlet cloth, and man on horseback, walked on a tight rope. Today the circus claims to have a new wonder of the world, in a four-footed Blondin, and the elephant on a bicycle, challenges all the bi and tri-cycles in France.

The fete of the Field of the Cloth of Gold near Calais, given by Francis I to Henry VIII is best remembered by having exhausted the French treasury—the King lost everything there again—save honor. Henri II, to mark the crowning of his queen, gave a fete, where four Calvanists were butchered to make a Paris holiday; his Majesty and the Court looked on the Ashantee divertissment; it was the commencement of ill luck for that line of the royal bouse, as the religious struggle in-volved its extinction. The high-jinks given in benor of the marriage of the Dauphin and Marie Autoinette, cost 80,000 fr., while at the same moment famine was sore in the land; the single province of Limousin, 4,000 person died from starvation. But that was no remove why Paris should not have its cakes and ale in August, 1793, the Convention, gave a fote, that no doubt suggested to Bartholdi the idea of his big statue, "Liberty enlightening of the nobility etc. When a torch was applied to the mass, a cloud of small birds flew out with tiny ribbon tricolor favors, the nationa colors, while two doves improved the occusion to nestle in the folds of the drapery of the goddess. At the present moment, when political cannibalism reigns so extensively, the fete of September 1795, might be tried on—that of On the retired list of the navy there are 337 dissident brothers, loving friends—a kind of overture of the millenning.
